Richard grew up in his father's boat shop and began to help him build boats when he was very young. Richard's name started appearing as a builder in 1983 when he helped to father build the 28-foot schooner, "Equinox" given to Mystic Seaport. Richard grew up to be a fine boat builder. "He's a better boat builder than I am." Ralph told Charlotte Morrill in 2010. He began working full time at the boatyard after he graduated from the Boat School in 1982. He bought an interest in the business in 1986 and ran the shop from that time until Ralph Stanley died in 2009. Richard and his wife Lorraine (Strauss) Stanley continue his father's boat building tradition in their boat shop, "Great Harbor Boatworks" in Manset, Maine.
